KEEPING Their FAITH IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Helping your children graduate with their faith and values intact

A Gateways Seminar for Parents, Grandparents and Community Members

Monday, August 10, 2020
6:30—8:30 P.M.

Host: True Texas Project

Help your children travel through the public schools with their faith and values intact.

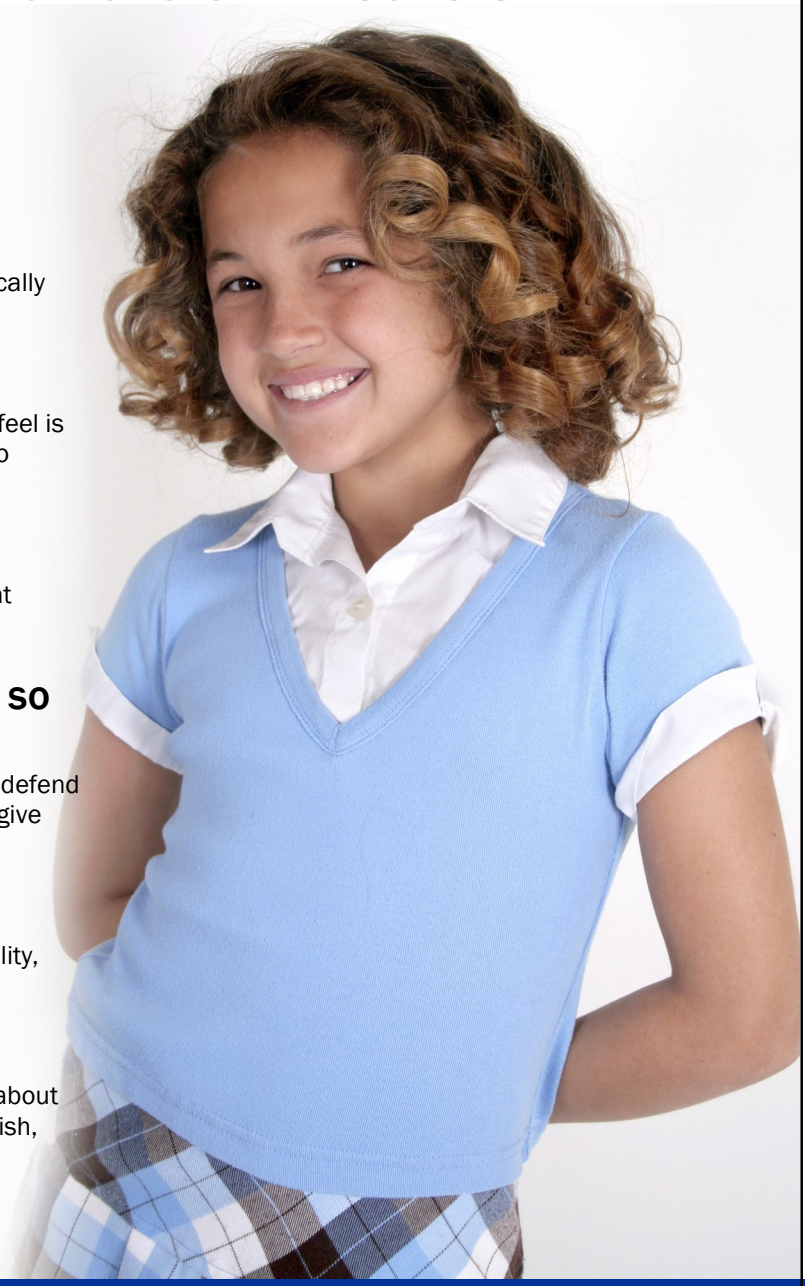
You will discover:

A powerful way to teach your children discernment in class
More than ever before, Christian parents need to know how to help their children discern "politically correct" opinions and subtle bias that may run counter to your family's faith and values.

How to address a concern with a teacher in a gracious way
There will be times when you need to talk to a teacher about a topic or activity in class that you feel is questionable. You will learn the five criteria for evaluating your concerns and a successful way to approach the teacher.

Students' religious liberties in class
You'll learn the six religious liberties the U.S. Department of Education says your children have at school and how to protect and promote them in a relational way.

How to teach your children a biblical definition of tolerance so they hold fast to their moral values and convictions
Unfortunately, many people misuse the word "tolerance" resulting in students feeling unable to defend their biblically-based moral convictions. You'll discover a biblical approach to tolerance that will give your children confidence to stand strong while also expressing kindness and respect.

How to encourage your children toward good character
Discover a simple, two-step technique to help your children develop qualities such as responsibility, dependability, generosity, thoughtfulness, compassion, hard work, and resilience.


How to connect the Bible to an academic subject
Learning an academic subject can be an act of worship if students know how to think biblically about it. Discover how to help your children apply Bible verses to subjects such as math, science, English, and history.
